RAMALLAH, West Bank, May 15 (R). - Israeli authorities have stepped up security precautions on the occupied West Bank to prevent demonstrations on today's anniversary of the 30th year of Israel's existence, military sources said. They said several Arabs were arrested in the area. Israel celebrated its anniversary according to the Jewish calendar on May 11, but the day is observed by Arabs on May 15. On past anniversaries, West Bank towns were the scenes of violent clashes. Slogans painted on walls throughout the West Bank called on residents to "rise up against the Zionist enemy." Schools here and in Nablus, the largest town on the West Bank, were closed when students attempting to demonstrate were sent home.

JORDA

BEIRUT, May 15 (Agencies). — President Elias Sarkis declared today that the resigned, eight-man cabinet of Premier Salim Al Hoss has been reinstated.

Premier Al Hoss had resigned 26 days ago, when President Sarkis asked him to form a broad cabinet of politicians under the banner of "national detente". But Mr. Al Hoss stumbled over "unsurmountable obstacles", and President Sarkis asked him to reinstate his cabinet of technocrats.

Commenting on Mr. Al Hoss' failure to form a new government, a political party leader said "Lebanon still has a long way to go before the wounds of the civil war are healed." President Sarkis told reporters: "We opted to reinstate the government of Premier Al Hoss, because it is the government that blueprinted reconstruction projects and prepared the draft budget."

Mr. Al Hoss was the first premier to run state affairs after the 1975-76 civil war that claimed more than 37,000 lives and wrecked the economy. In a separate development, President Sarkis today received Brig. Mohammad Al Kholi, a Syrian special envoy.

Well-informed sources said that Brig. Al Kholi called on President Sarkis as Syrian President Hafez Assad's envoy. No details were available on the subjects discussed during the meeting.

Sympathy for Moro shows up in local

ROME, May 15 (Agencies) — The ruling Christian Democrats, whose President, Aldo Mo-ro, was assassinated last week, gained substantially in first returns from local elections held today.

The Communist Party, second largest after the Christian Democrats, lost in some towns, held firm in others and made some gains, according to the early partial returns.

In Viterbo, north of Rome, the Christian democrats gained 44.2 per cent of the vote compared to 39.4 in the general election of June 1976 while the Communists slumped from 39.6 per cent to 24,2 per

In the north Italian town of Pavia, the Christian Democratic share of the vote jumped from 33.5 to 38.4 per cent while the Communists dropped from 41.1 to 32.4 per cent.

Main reason for the Christian Democrats' gains was the voter's sympathy for murdered former Premier Moro. The bullet-riddled body of the Christian Democratic Party president was dumped by his urban guerrilla kidnappers in ce-ntrai Rome last Tuesday. Both the Communists and the Christian Democrats, whose minority government the Communists formally back, have run their election campaigns on a tough anti-terrorist from W. Bank, Gaza as 1st step to peace

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM, May 15 (AP). - Prime Minister Menachem Begin, has rejected a proposal by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to turn over control of the occupied West Bank and to return the Gaza Strip to Egypt as a first step towards a Middle East peace.

President Sadat's suggestion, in a New York Times interview, seemed designed to overcome Israeli objections to creating a Palestinian homeland in these areas were 1.1 million Palestinians live,

In a speech late on Saturday to European fund raisers, Pr-emier Begin again insisted that Israel would not withdraw to "the aggression-provoking, bloodshed-causing" lines it he-ld before the 1967 war.

Without mentioning President Sadat by name, he said Israel was now being asked to pull back to its former boundaries without negotiations and without a peace treaty. An aide later confirmed Premier Begin was referring to the Sadat interview.

Menachem the myth-maker

A Louis Harris poll indicates that two-thirds of American Jews oppose Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's hardline position on continuing the occupation of the West Bank. It is difficult these days to get in a rational word about the need for an Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank, what with the new Israeli chief of staff saying the territory is vital for Israel's security, and the Israeli Cabinet supporting that position in its weekly meeting.

The importance of the Harris poll is not to be overlooked, but neither should it lead to hasty expectations. Its real importance is as an indicator -- the latest of many -- that the vital link between Israel and the Jews of Europe and North America is not as inflexible as it has always been. That international connection has always been the strategic depth for Israel, as well as the dynamic cutting edge of its day-to-day political activity in such capitals as Washington, London and Paris. This is unusual in the context of international politics, where one's strategic and tactical instruments are more clearly separated into domestic and foreign branches. But it is not unusual in the context of a colonial outpost. Israel has always depended on the massive backing of Zionist forces in North America and Europe, and it does so today more than ever. Thus for cracks to start appearing in the facade of international Jewish unanimity behind the policies of Mr. Begin is something that should be most worrying to the Israeli govern-

We feel that the process that has been underway for the past decade or so is an inevitable one, and can best be characterised as the acceptance of Israeli dogma as political mythology. A myth, by nature, will be recognised as such if it is touted for any period of time, and the myth of benign Zionist territorial conquests in Palestine is now being recognised increasingly for what it is - - a myth. This is one meaning of the Harris Poll, as it is one meaning of the universal international disappointment with Mr. Begin's idiotic home-rule proposals for the West Bank and Gaza. Mr. Begin will yell and scream about his desire for peace -- as he did in the United States last week -but he will only further expose his true nature as a modern day conquistador, and he should wake up and recognise this from such evidence as this week's Harris poll.

Fun, games and lots of horseplay mark the Royal Riding Club's first event

By Ginette Devaney Photos by Ted Devaney Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN. — On a bright Friday in May the members of the Ro-yal Riding Club held their first organised event at the club grounds at Juewdaideh, not far from the television and radio station, on the road to Organised and run by the voluntary Manager of the club, Mrs. Marina Hamric, the day was divided into two parts. First, a simple cross country raily, about 1,500 metres long. in which competitors were as-ked to walk, trot and canter at various predetermined points, where stewards marked individual riders on their per-formances and the obedience of the horse. A small log was included on the outward leg of the course, which some of the riders found difficult to negotiate successfully. Marks were deducted for incorrect paces, failure to take the log jump and the overall time was taken into consideration. Thirteen horses took part, some of them being ridden twice, as there were more riders than horses, and this contest was won by Mrs. Elizabeth Martin riding her horse Tahar.

Then, after a barbecue lunch, provided and cooked by the members, an enjoyable afternoon was spent by everybody in the two gymkhana events -- games on horseback! In the first instance, competitors were asked by Mrs. Hamric to take off their boots which were then piled up some distance away from the line of waiting horses and riders. At the whistle, the dismounted competitors had to run to the pile, find and don their own boots, run back to the horse, gallop to a post at some distance from the game area, return, dismount, take the boots back to the pile and then remount. As can be imagined, much amusement resulted, particularly from the search for and putting on of boots -- riding boots can be most difficult to manoeuvre quickly, sometimes needing both boot jacks and boot hooks to put on and take off successfully.

This event was won by Mrs. Jill Goddard riding her mare

The second event, a bending race, involved horse and rider weaving in and out of equally spaced white poles and then cantering through a finishing gate. Penalties were awar-ded for horses either knocking poles over or taking a wrong course. This sort of competition is a very good test of a horse's suppleness and obedience to the rider's aids or instructions, when done properly. This event was won by Mr. Ghattas Jordan riding Mrs. Hamric's horse Naji,

As this was a first attempt at competing, some riders (and horses too), did not know quite what to expect but every-body agreed that it was a very successful meeting, and the club hopes to be able to hold such events regularly -- at least once a month in the fu-

With Crown Prince Hassan as its honorary president, the Royal Riding Club was previ-ously based at the Royal Ra-cing Club at Marka, but in the summer of 1976 they moved to their present grounds. The Royal Shooting Club and its president, His Highness Prince Mohammad, agreed to loan the land indefinitely to these horselovers who banded together to start the club.

With a membership of only 20 at the start, the club has grown to a group of about 50. There are 15 horses in the stable, two owned by the club and 13 by individual members. All the horses are looked after by 2 grooms under the direc-tion of Mrs. Hamric. It costs JD 36 ped month to keep a house at the stables -- feed included.

Once the land was granted to the riding club, three stages in a grand design were planned and with the help and support of Sharif Fawwaz Sharaf, the Minister of Culture and Youth, who has generously given money for the project, and with additional donations from members themselves, stage one is now

There is a stable block containing 20 loose boxes with room for a feed store and tack room. A hard standing has been put down in front of the block. Due to the high cost of land excavation and work, the second stage is still in its infancy. The idea is to have a 60m. long by 35 m. wide outdoor menage for shows, training classes and demonstrations.

The land chosen for this, lying opposite the stable block, was of a steep and rocky nature, so heavy machinery and blasting equipment had to be brought in When complete, the menage will have a surface of soil, sand and sawdust. will be completely fenced in and will provide an ideal area for the improvement of both horses and riders. It is hoped that this stage will be com-pleted in four to six weeks

Mr. Robert Srouji, Chairman the Executive Committee, told the Jordan Times that, at the moment, not many young children are encouraged to be-come members because the club felt that a safe area for the training of novices was an absolute necessity for junior members. However, once the outdoor school is completed, it is expected that 50 per cent of the members will be youngsters -- many are hopefully waiting on the sidelines.

Stage three of the plan is for the building of a small rest house complex at the north west edge of the school where members and guests will be able to sit and watch the activities going on. The club hopes, with the continued help of Sharif Fawwaz, to raise JD 6,000 to build the resthouse and to bring the whole complex up to as high

Pro-growth policies are cause of world's high unemployment, chronic study inflation, shows research

WASHINGTON, May 15 (AP). - Chronic inflation and high unemployment that today plague much of the world are the result of pro-growth policies that are depleting the world's resources, a study by a the head of a private research organisation said yesterday. "Global doubledigit, inflation is unique to the seventies, but the pressures leading up to it have been building for decades," Lester R. Brown, head of the Worldwatch Institute of Washington, said in the study.

Not only is cheap energy now in short supply, but for-ests, fish and farmlands also are being depleted at a rapid rate, he said. The problem will only get worse unless the world's nations stop their headlong rush toward rapid gro-wth and take new steps to curb population growth, If they don't slow their growth, the world will slow it for them, Mr. Brown said, under circumstances that will be more tragic and chaotic than if they do it in a planned and voluntary fashion.

Mr. Brown said in his study, called The Global Economic Prospect: New Sources of Economic Stress, that most of the Middle East and North Africa and much of continental Asia, Central America and the Andean regions of South America are now virtually treeless. He said in some countries, such as the United States, the cropland being lost exceeds the new land being brought under the plow. Returns on additional fertilizer use are beginning to fall off in those areas where its use has been heaviest, he said. The per acre yield of cerea-ls in the United States in 1977 was below the yield of the early part of the decade, he added, "Most of the world's easy-to-irrigate sites have al-ready been developed. Further expansion in irrigation inevitably involves heavy expendi-

All economies are being affected by depleting resources, Mr. Brown said. The Soviet Union, for example, has had to substantially lower its own growth expectations in its latest five-year plan.

The huge Soviet purchase of U.S. wheat in 1972 that contributed to an upward spiral of wheat throughout the world shouldn't be seen as an isolated event, but as "a triggering event bringing the longer-term trends into focus," he said. He said that while the world is not running out of energy, it is running out of oil and appears to be running out of cheap energy, and he urged concentration on solar energy

"A sustainable economic system is possible only if alternative energy sources are developed before world oil production turns downward and before economic disruptions occur," he said

Citibank sells most of Iranian bank holding

TEHRAN, Iran May 15 (AP). - Citibank today sold 30 per cent of its 35 per cent holdings in the Iranians' Bank, a spokesman for the New York bank announced.

Ata Salmanpour, president of the Iranians' Bank, said Citibank's holdings were bo-ught by Iranians' Bank employees as part of an employee participation programme.

He also said the decision to sell was consistent with Citibank's general policy to have either management control or a substantial majority position in its joint ventures. Salmanpour said Iranian law does not permit either of the two positions, so Citibank began negotiations a year ago to reduce its holdings.

UNICEF funds social programmes for black guerrilla movements

UNITED NATIONS, May 15 (AP). — The U.N. Children's Fund is giving economic and humanitarian aid or social service training to four guerrilla movements directed against the governments of Rhodesia and South Africa and the South African administration of South-West Africa, its annual report shows. The report, placed before UNICEF's Executive Board at the start of a two-week annual session today, described the four as "liberation movements recognised by the Organisation of African Unity" and listed them

The Patriotic Front of Zimbabwe, also called Rhodesia the South-West Africa People's Organisation, interested in the territory also called Namibia, and the Pan Africanist Congress and the African National Congress, rival black na tionalist movements outlawed in South Africa. The report issued by UNICEF Executive Director Henry R. Labouisse said that in Tanzania last year, his agency, an integral part of the United Nations, 'supported the health auxiliaries' belonging to all four movements.

It said that a first group of 30 medical auxiliaries completed a crash course in April 1977, and five more groups are being similarly trained for a target of 18, within three years. "Twenty-five medical assistants and six technical auxiliaries are also being trained in a longer course of three years' duration. Plans were in progress to establish a maternal and cuid care center attached to this training institu-tion, for which UNICEF offered to provide the construction cost and equipments it said.

The report did not say how much UNICEF spent in Tanzania. But it said that in Zambia, the agency spent $132,00 last year through the Patriotic Front and SWAPO.

International Year of the Child

UNICEF is asking its executive board to approve a $1.4 billion, five-year programme of aid to children to follow up the International Year of the Child, 1979. Mr. Labouisse outlined the plan in his annual report and asked the 32nation board to approve it. Labouisse noted that the objective of the International Year of the Child, proclaimed by the U.N. General Assembly in 1976, was to get governments to commit themselves to long-term measures to better the lot of children in their countries.

He said about 30 industrialised nations and more than 80 developing countries were planning to observe the year, and UNICEF should give them advice and help in attaining its

Calculating that inflation would shrink the buying power of the $1.4 billion to $1.2 billion, Labouisse called for the expenditure in developing areas of these amounts: -- $500 million to reduce from 400 million to 350 million the number of children under seven without access to health services. $250 million to cut from 320 million to 285 million the number of children without access to safe drinking water, $250 million to improve primary education.

Moslem refugee influx causes Bangladesh humanitarian problems, a rift with Burma

By Atlqui Alam

DACCA, (R). - An influx of about 100,000 Moslem refugees in less than a month is posing vast humanitarian problems for impoverished Bangladesh and causing a rift in its relations with neighbouring Burma. The Bangladesh government has already called for the re-patriation of the refugees who have fled across the border, claiming the Burmese army drove them from their homes at gunpoint.

"If this flow continues, it will be absurd to think that our relations with Burma are still friendly and normal," an official spokesman said here.

Conflicting stories government The Burmese Thursday denied charges by refugees that its army was waging a campaign of terror against the Moslem minority. A series of articles in government-owned Dewspapers said Moslems had lived happily with Burma's mainly Buddhist population for years and had enjoyed absolute freedom of worship. Earlier the official Burmese News Agency said some 20,000 Bengalis had left Burma because they lacked proper entry and registration papers.

But the refugees gave a todifferent picture and tally some of them produced their national registration cards to back claims to Burmese nationality.

They have alleged a concerted campaign against the Mosiem community in the northwest province of Arakan, bordering the Chittagong district of Bangladesh and have accused Burmese troops of rape, torture and robbery.

According to officials here, some of the Moslems have crossed the border with bullet wounds in recent days. The refugees now live in more than 300 camps put up along the border by the Ban-gladesh Red Cross. Food and other facilities are provided by the government. No outbreak of diseases have so far been reported in the camps. But the arrival of the monsoon in the next two months could alter the situation in the remote southeastern tip of the country where natural disasters occur regularly.

Bangladesh Foreign Secretary Tobarak Hossein said after a recent tour of the frontier: "We certainly need international help to keep these people alive."

With over 75 million people and serious economic woes of its own Bangladesh is hardly in a position to support a re-lief operation of this size which could cost up to $1 million a month, according to officials.

There has so far been no detailed explanation for the sudden exodus from predominantly-Buddhist Burma, though some of the refugees have spoken of a Burmese campaign against the growing economic power of the Moslems in Arakan, a jungle-clad pro-vince separated from the rest of Burma by massive mountain ranges.

Suspected rebellion

But according to some observers here, the Burmese government suspected the Moslems of supporting communist rebel groups fighting against the government of President Ne Win.

Some of the rebel groups are known to be demanding autonomy for Arakan, a coastal strip on the bay of Bengal.

Separatist and racist groups the people in the area, accorreligious and racial feelings of have often tried to exploit the ding to informed sources in RADPOOR

Most of the Moslems who have arrived in Bangladesh claim to belong to three distinct groups, none of them ethnic Burmese.
The largest group, known as the Rohingyas, claim to be of Bangladesh and Burma. Another Moslem sect, the Kamanchi, say their forebears came to Burma at the turn of the 18th century and settled in Arakan, mainly as tra-

The other important group is made up of Bengali farmers and fishermen who have migrated across the border over several decades.

The Moslems, most of whom settled around the township of Buthidaung, speak a variety of regional dialects and some older people also speak Arabic or Urdu. According to Bangladesh estimates there are 600,000 Moslems in the area. Because of religious affinity with the Bengali state the Moslems developed close ties with Bangladesh or East Pakistan as it was known before the breakup of Pakistan in 1971.

The border problem goes back to 1942 when some Moslems are said to have fled from Burma following communal riots. But the issue never came in the way of good relations between the two neighbours.

It was taken up by Bangladesh for the arst time in 1975 following the arrival of some 3,500 people across the border and President Ziaur Rahman mentioned it to Burmese leaders when he visited

The two governments agre-The two government agreed then to look into the problem and Burmese Foreign Minister, Brigadier-General MyInt Maunt, discussed the issue in detail during a recent visit here.

But, according to informed sources, little progress was made at the talks.

World search is planned for potential uranium resources

By Peter Lang

VIENNA, (WFS) -- Worldwide exploration for uranium is at a record level, with customers moving to assure long-term supplies. In addition, there are plans for a programme to evaluate the world's uranium potential by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and the industrial countries of the Organisation for Economic Coopeand Development ration (OECD).

The need for assured, longterm supplies is emphasised by the projected increase in requirements over the next quarter century: demand for natural uranium in 1977 was 23,000 tons, but this is expected by the IAEA here to be within the range of 102,000-156,000 tons by 1990, and within the range of 178,000-338,000 tons by the end of the century.

Currently, most of the world's uranium (apart from Soviet and Chinese requirements) comes from the United States, South Africa, Canada and Australia, where the government decided last year to press ahead with the devecopment of its massive potential uranium resources despite political opposition.

What is possibly one of the world's largest discoveries was made near Darwin, northern Australia, earlier this year, and Australia is generally thought to have about 20 per cent of world reserves outside the Communist countries. Generally, the IAEA says, exploration is at a high level, and 1977 is likely to have been a record year. The surge in activity began in 1973, as consumers moved actively to acquire long-term supplies to meet growing nuclear power programmes, particularly in the industrialised Western countries. One of the few countries where exploration declined during the mid-1970's was Australia, because of the political uncertainty, but now that the decision to go ahead has been taken, exploration is likely to be stepped up con-siderably, with finds possible as the new discovery shows. North America spends most on exploration, while other major programmes are taking place in Brazil, France, Iran, Italy, South Africa and Spain.

A worldwide assessment of potential uranium resources is expected to reveal unexpected bounty in many developing countries, as the long-term need for assured supplies becomes more pressing.

tional borders have been financed by France, West Germany, Japan and the United States.

Major programmes beyond na-

Unexplored areas

Many of the unexplored areas are in developing countries, although some reasonably-assured reserves have already been confirmed in such areas, notably in India, Gabon. Niger, Somalia, Algeria and the Argentine. The decision the IAEA and the OECD for a worldwide assessment of potential uranium resources makes it likely that more reserves in developing countries could be discovered.

The IAEA puts the world total of what it calls reasonably-assured resources at 2.2 million tons, with a further 2.1 million tons as estimated additional resources, at January 1, 1977, and points out that political limitations will be very important in determining what is actually available. World prices for uranium for near-term delivery have responded to market factors and cost increases (labour and fuel costs in mining have risen sharply, for example) by trebling between 1974-77 and further rises are expected.

Estimated production

Estimated production in 1977 was 11,200 tons in the United States, 6,700 in South Africa, 6,100 in Canada, 2,200 in France, 1,609 in Niger. Australia's production (400 tons), having been held back by political considerations, is now expected to rise sharply to 20,000 tons by 1990. By that date, Canada's production is expected to be more than 11,000 tons, France 4,000, South Africa 12,000 and the United States 47,000.

Niger's production will have untries such as the Central African Empire and Gabon will have joined the group of bigger producers. In the long-term, it is seen risen to 9,000 tons, while co-

as urgent that uranium reserves he identified, even though the rate of nuclear power development is likely to be held back by a variety of pressures, including political and environmental considerations, while another factor may be the increasing use of fast re-actors which "breed" their own fuel, in, ideally, a selfsustaining cycle.

Looking to the future, the depletion of fossil fuels is likely to lead to deposits of uranium which are at present considered too expensive to mine becoming acceptably-priced as the need for them increases. This also applies to the development -- albeit at great cost -- of technology to harvest uranium from the sea. There is said to be one gram of uranium to every 300 tons of sea water, meaning that there are billions of tons of uranium in the sea.

Dear Omar: I agree with you completely. Somehow or other, the little swindles you manage to pull off give you more pleasure than many of the really fine plays you come up with over the years. As an example, I am particularly fond of this hand, which belped Helen Sobel and me to win the Life Master Pairs for the Von Zedtwitz Gold Cup back in 1958.

My bid of three spades was designed more in the hope of keeping the opponents out of the auction than of getting to game, but Helen was never one to linger in a part score if she could see any chance for game. In a way, her decision was right, for the opponents could make ten tricks in a minor-suit contract.

West led the king of hearts and East followed with the six. I was not unhappy with the contract, for we seemed sure of a reasonable score for making nine tricks. The chances for ten were not bright, since East surely held the ace-queen of diamonds for his double once West showed up with the king-queen of hearts.

However, I did not despair. The spots in the hearts suit were significant. I won the ace of hearts, drew trumps in one round and now led a sneaky three of hearts! West saw no reason to squander his queen on a lowly five, so he played low. As I hoped, East was forced to win this trick, and the contract could no longer be defeated.

East cashed the king of clubs and continued with the queen. I ruffed and led the jack of hearts, ruffing in dummy when West covered. I returned to my hand with a club ruff, discarded a diamond from dummy on the ten of hearts, and graciously conceded a diamond trick to the opponents and claimed my contact.

Pakistan's flogging condemned

LONDON, May 15 (AP). — Amnesty International in a report today condemned the use of flogging in Pakistan as "a cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment."

It said it was particularly concerned about the practice of trying civilians charged with political offenses before military courts, which often inflict sentences of flogging. The independent London-based organisation has made political prisoners around the world its special concern and was awarded the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize for its work.

Its report said at least 160 prisoners so far have been sentenced to flokking for political activities in Pakistan.

The report was by an Amnesty team that visited Pakistan in January. Flogging was part of a set of stern martial law provisions which curtail fundamental freedoms and provide for preventive detention, it said. It added that flogging was being "inflicted on political prisoners for committing acts which often appear to be no more than the exercise of the right of freedom of speech and expression guaranteed in the constitution."
